

Your situation

You have informed participants that the research materials, including their personal data, would be shared with other researchers, but have not specified that this would be done via a third-party data repository.

You continue to hold participants' contact details (e.g. addresses, phone numbers, etc.)

You plan to re-inform participants.

Try again

Re-inform the participants, or even better, obtain their explicit consent to the sharing of their personal data via a third-party repository, and carry out another shareability evaluation.
